Tracking the Itata.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The air of secrecy surrounding the Itata case is just as pronounced as ever in the Navy Department today, and it is evident that the officials have no desire to take the public into their confidence. The conviction, however, is general that the Charleston has been sent with secret orders to capture the Chilean steamer.

It is said that sufficient information is in the hands of the Government to warrant a belief that the Itata will be next heard of touching at some Mexican port and that probably the Charleston will make her first stop about midway down the west coast of Mexico, in the hope of picking up hints as to the Itata's whereabouts.

At Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Secretary Tracy this afternoon sent out word that he had nothing to say about the Chilean vessel Itata or Charleston. Other officials in the Navy Department are equally reticent. The official mind of the Department is in dread that any possible unguarded admission to a reporter might

ON HER TRACK.

The Charleston Ordered to Capture the Itata.

Robert and Minnie Brought Into Port.

The Naval Authorities Refuse to Talk—Every Nerve Strained to Catch the Steamer.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—The fact is no longer concealed, even in official naval circles, that the swift cruiser Charleston is now off on a hot chase after the Chilean transport Itata, which left San Diego last Wednesday while under arrest, carrying with her a deputy United States Marshal. The Itata after leaving San Diego took on board rifles and ammunition which had been shipped from San Francisco on the schooner Robert and Minnie. The transfer of the latter's cargo is believed to have occurred off San Clemente Island, and it is further surmised that the Itata steamed south on Friday night.

The Chilean cruiser Esmeralda is believed to be lying off Cape San Lucas, which is the most southern point of land in Lower California, awaiting the supplies carried by the Itata. The run to that point is about one hundred miles.
The Itata being heavily loaded, it is estimated that, although reputed to be a fast craft, she cannot make over six to eight knots, while the Charleston, which left San Pedro this morning, is thought certain to overtake her or reach San Lucas in advance of the transport. If not found there the Charleston will proceed directly to Acapulco, which will be the first point at which any further intelligence can be received.

Even though the cruiser Esmeralda should be met as a convoy of the Itata it is understood that the orders of the Charleston are explicit on the point of capture, and if the Itata is sighted it is believed certain that there will be a capture or a fight or both. The fact that a Chilean cruiser accompanied the Itata north was first ascertained through deserters from the Itata, who escaped from that steamer at San Diego. It was at first denied that one of the most powerful of the Chilean warships should go so far from the Chilean coast at this juncture, but it is now known that the Esmeralda is now in port at Acapulco, on the Mexican coast, which fact the Navy Department at Washington was probably fully advised of when orders were issued to the Charleston. The effort to keep the destination of the Charleston a secret therefore was natural, as representatives of the Chilean insurgents would be prompt to advise the Esmeralda of the intention of the American Government to seize the Itata, and it is now deemed probable that the Esmeralda will cruise north toward San Lucas in the hope of meeting the Itata before the Charleston can arrive, and to protect the cargo and crew if possible.
Apart from other considerations, it is now known that on board the Itata is the commander of the Esmeralda and a large portion of her crew, and presumably a portion of the Esmeralda's secondary battery. The effort to keep the destination of the Charleston a secret therefore was natural, as representatives of the Chilean insurgents would be prompt to advise the Esmeralda of the intention of the American Government to seize the Itata,

the American Government to seize the Itata,
